Our Congressman Gains Statue

OUR CONGRESSMAN, Prince H. Preston Jr., is becoming a bigger man in our National Congress.

He was given a major part of the credit for the defeat which the House Democrats recently gave Republicans in rejecting a proposal to grant three cabinet officers "absolute discretion" to fire employees in their departments when they deemed it "advisable in the interest of the United States."

Congressman Preston, who is a member of the important appropriations committee, was one of the leaders of the Democratic opposition to the Republican sponsored rider to an appropriations bill. He shared honors with Rep. Rooney, New York Democrat, in occupying the minority leadership desk and allotting time for opposition speakers during the debate.

Congressman Preston also was a joint sponsor of the motion which struck the offending rider from the bill. He made a vigorous speech denouncing the rider and took an active part in the debate.

According to the Atlanta Constitution's Washington Correspondent, Gladstone Williams, the sweeping firing authority which would have suspended the job rights of veterans and career nonveterans was eliminated from the State, Justice and Commerce departments appropriation bill by vote of 181 to 167. Under it, the three cabinet heads would have been given freedom to fire employees, regardless of veterans preference rights and civil service rules.

In his speech, Congressman Preston accused Republicans of political patronage maneuvering in seeking to give the cabinet officers authority to discard workers. He told the House there was no need for such a provision since President Eisenhower, acting under existing authority, had already undertaken to deal with the problem on a common basis, putting all agencies of the government under one rule, which he said was only proper.

It was one of the first major defeats the Republicans have suffered since taking over organizational control of the new Congress.

Former speaker of the House, Rayburn and other Democratic leaders complimented our Congressman for the effective way he handled the opposition.

And the citizens of Savannah should be thankful that their Congressman stands in high esteem in our National Congress.

He is now active in the fight to save the U. S. Public Health Hospital in Savannah from a contemplated appropriation cut. Congressman Preston is joined in the fight by Senators Russell and George.

Congressman Preston has written a letter to the people in Savannah, saying, "I will do all within my power to keep the appropriation at a level which would insure the continuous operation of our hospital."

That's our Congressman, hard at work, representing not only the First District of Georgia, but every section of the nation.

We Liked It

"JUST THE OTHER DAY" is more than a charming miscellany of the theatre. Mr. Morehouse takes time to sketch a happy childhood in the turpentine and sulphur country of south Georgia. There's a grotesque, immensely amusing account of a youthful barnstorming tour with a one-man Shakespearean troupe. ... There's a poignant chapter on the last days of The New York Sun. Deep in memory lane, he pauses to write a whole chapter on the life and times of the incomparable Gertrude Lawrence. This is first and last the testament of a stage-struck Georgian who knew just where he was headed from the start—and enjoyed each milestone along the way."

That's what William Du Bois of The New York Times has to say about the new book "Just The Other Day" written by "our" Ward Morehouse—we call him ours because he married "our" Ruth Rebecca Franklin, daughter of "Miss Pearl" Franklin, and the late Hershel V. Franklin.

The writer of the New York Times did not have space to mention the book's chapter in which Ward wrote of his courtship of and marriage to Ruth Rebecca.

The reader gets that "I Can See It Now" feeling from the moment Ward sees Ruth Rebecca for the first time in the morgue of the Atlanta Journal, until H. V. tells him "the preacher's waiting."

Descriptions of M. J. Bowen and his store, of Register, of Savannah, of Valdosta, of Atlanta, add up to delightful reading.

We liked it.

'New' College Pharmacy

THIS WEEK we commend Everett Williams on the opening of his "New" College Pharmacy.

Following extensive remodeling and renovation Mr. Williams held "open house" at the College Pharmacy last Saturday and Monday of this week.

It becomes one of the city's finest drug stores, and one which is a credit to our community.

Up She Goes Again

WE'VE BEEN holding our beat-up hat in our hands since April 17, getting ready to throw it high into the sky.

This week we turn 'er loose and whoop for two of Bulloch County's fine youth.

For Charles Walker of Register, for winning the annual Future Farmers of America Purebred Hog Show, and for Clara Nell Roberts for showing the grand champion cow at the annual Fat Stock Show.

And for all the Future Farmers of

Know Your Bulloch County?

How well do you know your Bulloch County?

If you know it pretty good here is an opportunity to share your knowledge with someone who plans to put it to good use.

Mr. John H. Goff, at Emory University, is writing a book on Georgia. He's gathering information from all over. There are some things about Bulloch County that he would like to know so he wrote Donald McDougald, who is a graduate of Emory, to help him.

And Donald thinks that there are people in Bulloch County who can help Mr. Goff.

Here are some of the things he wishes to know.

In the Northwest section of Bulloch County, running northwest-southwest there is an old thoroughfare called the "Two Chop Road." Do any of our readers know where this road came from and where it went?

South of Statesboro, where the Burkhalter-Pembroke roads meet is a crossroad called Middle Ground; and above Statesboro toward Blitch is another Middle Ground. How do these communities get their names? Anybody know?

Does anybody in Bulloch County about the "Old Rebel Road?" This thoroughfare seemed to circumscribe Savannah, beginning in Liberty County and curving through Bulloch, seemingly headed toward the Savannah River, across Effingham County. It has been mentioned numbers of times on old post-revolutionary hand-drawn maps. Know anything about the "Old Rebel Road?"

Does anyone in Bulloch County or surrounding counties, know of the "Old Sunbury Road?" This thoroughfare was one of the earliest (1794) long roads sponsored by the State of Georgia. It ran from Greensboro to Sunbury, and must have passed all the way across Bulloch. It has been found on old plats in the counties above, but not in Bulloch. You know anything about the "Old Sunbury Road?"

If any of our readers know anything about these things you may write to us and we'll forward the information to Don McDougald to forward to Mr. Goff.

Any information about "The Rebel Road" and the "Sunbury Road" should include points which these roads passed, churches, school sites, cemeteries, crossroads, etc. Mr. Goff says he has maps of the area and can easily pick out the courses of the road with the above information furnished.

4. There are three lookout towers in Bulloch County.

5. The forest fire towers are located at Nevils, at Arcola and at Hill Top.

6. To report woods fires call 501-L, your County Forestry Unit Headquarters.

7. More than $600,000,000 yearly turns over from forestry and forest operations and industries in Georgia.

8. More than 165,000 Georgians, 9. Slash Pine, Longleaf Pine and Loblolly Pine.

10. Pine seedlings can be ordered from the Georgia Forestry Commission at $2.75 per thousand.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION

Rural electrification consists of more than extension of power and light to rural homes and communities, according to engineers for the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Georgia. It involves the design and layout of wiring and lighting for farmsteads, farm homes, and livestock, storage and service structures.

NAVAL STORIES

South Georgia produces most of Georgia's naval stores, according to foresters for the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Georgia. The producing period is from March to November mainly, at a time when gum flows during the growing season. Cash income is available at regular intervals during this period.

CULTIVATING

Specialists for the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of Georgia state that there are two basic reasons for cultivating. These are to control weeds and to break the surface crust. They say that, if there are no weeds and no surface crust, they do not cultivate.

Cows should be dry at least six to eight weeks before calving, according to livestock specialists for the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Georgia.

the best bet against professional car thieves is to put some "secret" identifying mark on your car—like dropping your social security number in the door, or an Indian Head penny in the tire well, or think of the fun you can have putting "secret" identifying marks or things in your car.

We're going to put one in your car right away—but we're not going to tell where or what.

The thief may rebuild your car, change it from front to rear, but your "secret" mark will trip him when the police come calling.

THERE WAS MUCH ADO AND THE TOWN ABUZZING

The town was buzzing Tuesday morning.

Word got out that Dr. E. B. Rushing had, at his veterinary hospital on College street, a freak calf—with the body of a calf and the head of a human baby.

And the crowd turned up at Dr. Rushing's hospital, filled with curiosity.

Oh sure, we were curious too, but we got there late. The man to whom the freak calf belonged had come for it and carried it home.

Dr. Rushing, laughed at the idea, though he admitted that there was a vague resemblance to human features about the dead calf's head, but only with the imagination wide open.

Where Are You Going In Such A Great Big Hurry?

BY VIRGINIA RUSSELL

Where are you going in such a hurry? Where are we going in such a hurry?

We see you dash out to your car, start the motor, step on the gas and off you fly. You see us do the same. We pass you on the street, hurrying somewhere. You see us dashing here and there. Where are we going?

Our neighbor has been sick, H.W. haven't had a minute to even call. Another neighbor had a baby. We didn't even know she was expecting a baby. After all we've been hurrying so fast we haven't had time to do more than wave to her. My neighbors are busy too. They hurry, almost as fast as we, and as fast as we hurry.

We sometimes stop hurrying long enough to meditate. We start wondering what God must think about these children of His that He made in His own image. Did He ever intend that we should move about so much and at such speed?

If hurrying was his plan why do we have the birds? Have you had time lately to sit down in the early morning and listen to the birds? Have you watched them feed their young or better still, build their nests?

Have you leisurely watched a sun set? It seems that we can remember that a sunset has beauty unsurpassed but we've been too busy for ages now to watch the sunset. We've been hurrying to get a meal prepared so our family can eat in a hurry and out it, and we could hurry to wash the dishes. There's a meeting, you see, that we must hurry to.

Have you had time lately to wake of your own accord? That is, do you wake when you've had enough sleep or does an old alarm clock shock you out of your nervous sleep? Nervous because you're always a little worried for fear your tired body and brain will sleep through the alarm clock's ring. But do you remember what a grand feeling it is to stretch? And then curl your body up and stretch it out. Again, is it possible? (Go easy, if you haven't tried this in some time. You might get a cramp in your leg. We did.)

Have you had time to feel the early morning? To walk in the garden and see what has grown since yesterday? Have you had time to smell food cooking? Have you had time to eat good food quietly and peacefully, without watching the clock?

Have you had time to tell the folks you love, that you really do love them? Have you had time to visit the sick? Have you had time to write those folks you love a letter? If you've been like us, you've been hurrying so fast, you've just been too busy.

Somehow we just feel that if we're hurrying, we're not really living. We're just going through the motions. We're just going through the motions. We're just going through the motions.

Growing Day Lilies Can Be Fun And Profitable Turner Tells Denmark F.B.

Growing day lilies are fun and can be a remunerative hobby, H.W. Turner, local flower enthusiast and Bulloch County Farm Bureau member, told the Denmark Farm Bureau Tuesday night.

Mr. Turner carried numerous day lilies along to illustrate how he went about breeding them up for various colors. Glenn E. Moore, specialist with the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine from Tifton, joined with the men to discuss the pest infestation of sweet potato weevils.

Mr. Moore pointed out that this pest is in some near by counties and could be brought to Bulloch County by careless buying of plants and used crates. He urged that all potato growers procure certified plants. When this pest is found in an area, all the land within a mile of that infestation is put under a strict quarantine for a year. The potatoes are too bitter for food or hog feed when infested.

The Middle Ground Farm Bureau voted to ask the Bulloch County singing convention to meet with them the first Saturday in September. J. L. Deal, who presided in the absence of their president Thursday night, instructed Edgar McElmurry to extend the invitation for the group.

Middle Ground cotton growers were urged to not wait too long to start their fight on insects this year. It was pointed out that there are several insects that do right much damage to cotton other than boll weevils and will knock off the squares before they are large enough for weevils to damage them.

Leaflets on controlling cotton, corn, tobacco, garden and sweet potato insects were distributed to the group.

Barbecue suppers were served by Denmark and Middle Ground groups.

modern homes and adequate food production and preservation programs.

Mr. Vickery also states that a similar meeting is being held on May 18th, at Port Valley, Georgia, honoring outstanding Negro families in Georgia. Pete Slater and his wife Celia from the Middle Ground Community will attend this meeting. Pete made final payment in 1952 on the farm he and his wife purchased through the Farmers Home Administration program in 1941.

The aim of the Farmers Home Administration program is to help families farm better so they can live better. Farmers Home Administration makes loans to qualified families to operate farms including loans to buy livestock, equipment, seed, fertilizer and other supplies for production purposes, and loans for farm ownership including loans to buy, develop or enlarge farms and to improve inadequate housing.

John W. Sanders, of RFD 5, is the third Bulloch countyman whose family was recognized. He increased his net worth greatly. He purchased a farm in 1946 after renting for 14 years.

Cotton is the nation's most valuable crop and the only major crop producing fiber, food and feed.
